Hey, wanna do Iron Gate on Monday? It's supposed to be gorgeous--80s--and we haven't been outside in ages.

I've got a ton of ketchup to do around here.

I'm pretty sure you have orders from a superior officer to have fun this weekend. Besides, could be the last weekend before the rocks get cold. Just saying.

(Also, we can't do it today, because T. and Wabbit have declared it Movie Night at T. and my new place. And you're not going to make me suffer through art films alone.)

Ketchup is fun!

...Well, no, not exactly really. And you're right about the rocks.

...You'll give me a good report to Duke on Tuesday?

.....Art films? I thought Wabbit could be counted on to supply movies in which things blow up? Yikes!

I will tell him you were a trouper, and followed orders to the letter.

T. is picking the movies. 0.0

They're sneaking around behind my back. I think they're plotting something.

No Germans. Nooooooooo Germans. Or Russians. Or anywhere in Central Europe. If I have to read a movie, I want to laugh at the end of the subtitle.

I thought you weren't closing 'til next week? Did I get caught in a bright light from the sky and lose time?

We're not closing 'til next week, but since the property we're buying was a rental previously and is standing vacant, we worked out a deal where we could start moving in early, so we can be out of the old place by the first. Which is good for everybody involved. Basically, we're renting it for ten days.

Apparently, the current economy is encouraging a buyer's market, and home sellers are being extra nice.

So you're totally squatting in your new place!

Stop that! I'm nervous enough as it is!

I mean, you're establishing movie karma for our new place forever.

Congrats on placehood!

Got any spare brain bleach? I fear my dreams after that

Imagine, if you will, a Rubik's Cube designed by M.C. Escher.
